A Corvette Christmas:

Twas the night before Christmas, and who could forget a full year of events for us and our Corvettes.

*The Corvette was stored safely in the garage safe from the onslaught of winter's barrage.
The family was upstairs, asleep in their beds
While memories of the past year replayed in my head.*

Starting with New Year's Brunch at Calico Cupboard and a rainy day to the Tacoma Corvette Club open house at the Corvettes of Auburn shop. Then Summer finally came with our Anacortes Waterfront Festival shows and road trips to shows in Yakima and Corning with trophies galore and then on to Monterey/Carmel, the Canyons and sights to see beyond. Summer flew by with more shows with fun and camaraderie and of course more trophies. Fall brought tours with food and ale and sights of airplanes and finally Winter with Vettes stored away in deep slumber (at least for some).

Looking back as the song says, "Twas a very good year." Especially for Vetteheads one thing is clear, There is never a shortage of fun things to do. Races, shows, cruises, there's something for you to enjoy with your friends and your special Corvette every year just gets better, on that you can bet.

One last look at the photos that recorded the past Then looked at the clock, Christmas eve had passed fast.

*Christmas sunrise was just a few hours away, (and maybe a new C7 Grand Sport under the tree!). As I glanced out the window I saw Santa's sleigh. It looked strangely familiar like a Corvette on skis. With a fat man driving as fast as you please.
He laughed, waved, and called out, causing a scene as he shouted
" Happy Holiday to all and a Corvette 2019!"*

Corvette News:

Maybe that Special Event is the Caravan?

C8 Corvette rumored to launch next summer at dedicated event

GM Authority returns with more insider trading on the C8 Chevrolet Corvette. The site, which recently reported that America's sports car will be delayed six months over an electrical issue, says now that the launch won't come at an auto show. Citing "sources close to the matter," GMA says we're looking at a summer reveal, "perhaps May at the earliest," at a dedicated event where the 'Vette won't share its new look on life with any other vehicle. Seems only fitting, since two years ago Chevrolet launched the latest Camaro at a standalone event in May in Detroit.

Just what you need!

Two extremely rare L88 Chevrolet Corvettes are on their way to auction with Mecum in January. These two examples are being sold as a pair and could pull in some major bids, expected to eclipse the million-dollar mark.

Both of the L88 Corvettes here are 1969 year models, one being a hardtop and the other a convertible. They account for two of only 216 made from 1967-1969, making them some of the rarest cars you can buy, and as a set, you'll be snatching up a small stake of the total models ever built.
